The corpus required for retirement is the biggest as compared to the funds required for any other stage in life and no funding is available for this goal. Hence the planning for one's retirement should start well in time during one's active service life when one can put in efforts and also save money. Further, retirement is a certainty and if we are not financially well prepared for it, we may be required to compromise our standard of living post retirement, which none of us wants. Hence, planning for our retirement becomes very critical.

The distinguished speaker was CA Devendra Kr. Arora. having his own investment consultancy company by the name of Tejas Investments since early 2019.

During the session he talked about the importance of retirement planning, the way to assess the size of the required retirement corpus and the strategies to achieve the target through sensible investing, managing money post-retirement, understanding tax liability on capital gains etc. The session was attended by about 45 working professionals. The session generated a lot of discussion and it was demanded that we should organize such lectures often so as to cover a larger audience.
